

The American national idealism of today is not popularizing embroideries, lobbying for language standards or honoring long-dead historical figures.

These things are important in their own way, but excessive concerns with them will turn our ideology into a relic.

At all times nationalism has been a modern means of implementing rapid change.

On the grounds of tradition, he is creating new – what the nation needs to survive here and now.

Nationalism is an ideology of constructing the future –
do not let yourself be dragged into the abyss of escapism!

Inspired by the past, never forget –
of prime importance,
are the actions of today,
which form the agenda of tomorrow.

Our history is glorious and elaborate,
but its truly golden age lies in the future.

It's just beginning and the crucial battles are still ahead!
